UNKNOWN WINS MILLIONS.

Young Man Quietly Makes Big Fortune in Wall Street.

If Wall street has balanced last night its accounts for the last six weeks it would have discovered that at least $3,000,000 has been taken from the coffers by an unknown hand. That sum is "missing" in the sense that not half a dozen of the best-informed financiers could say into whose pockets the money has gone. It may, therefore, surprise Wall street to learn today that a beardless fortune-hunter of 28 has the money.

His name is J. Y. Livermore. He has been waiting patiently these five years for his opportunity. It came during the recent bear market, and Livermore operated on a scale which meant that he would either have princely wealth or become a pauper. Livermore's hair is nearly white, though he looks less than 28 years old. He has been "in the market" since he was a boy of 17, employed as a "marker" in a Boston broker's office. He saved his money and took flyers now and then in the bucket shops, but these shops, he says, didn't treat him fairly, so he came to New York to operate on a larger and safer scale. Not long ago he was certain that he detected the signs of a bear market early in the present campaign. He put out lines from 30,000 to 40,000 shares, and practically every transaction he made was a winning one. He operated silently, for Livermore is a quiet man.

One Wall street man said yesterday: "I do not believe it possible for a man to have won $3,000,000 in Wall street without the fact becoming known. The street is alert to know of operations involving that amount of money and who makes it." Mr. Livermore chuckled when told this last night, and said: "I have not paraded in the corridors of big hotels after the close of the market. I have chosen instead to return to my home, where I live quietly. I have not made myself conspicuous, and I see no reason why I should be known in Wall street."

Livermore purchased recently a handsome yacht, in which he will sail for a long cruise in Southern seas soon with a party of friends. He said last night that the first time his name ever got into print was last August, when he returned from Europe on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. His wife carried in her handbag diamonds and turquoises valued at $12,000. He declared the jewels, but did not have in cash the $7,000 demanded as duty. The customs authorities took charge of the jewels over night and more claimed them next morning, when he went to the bank and drew out $7,200. He is preparing to quit Wall street with his winnings.—New York World.

THE AUCTION.

(The American bellhounds who have married foreigners of title, have taken many millions out of the country, one estimate being that this amount totals nearly $300,000,000. One prominent banker thinks the withdrawal of this vast amount must have some effect upon the money market.—News Notes.)

Here's the matrimonial auction mart, Rare bargains here to gain, So read to the heart of womankind, And they flock in a steady train, For tarnished titles or mouldy crests, Some supercilious peers, Are the bargains, the terms are strictly cash, And snobs are the auctioneers.

A pink-faced lordling, a swaggering count, With crumbling ancestral hall, A baron who counts robbers bold in his race, A duke, greatest bargain of all, Are put on the block and the bidding begins; For the prize would each bidder, life pawn, And the contest grows keen as the millions put out—Going, going, gone.

But the bargains are dear for they cost far more, When the price at last is paid, The millions vanish in foreign lands, And the title's glories fade, Peace and happiness, love, content, Will not on titles fawn, And so with the millions they're flying off—Going, going, gone! —Baltimore American.
